

THE VEITHsymposium WELCOMES NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL VASCULAR SOCIETIES

The VEITHsymposium, a leading global educational platform for the diagnosis and treatment of vascular diseases, is pleased to announce the inclusion of the World Federation of Vascular Societies, the International Society for Women Vascular Surgeons, and the Society for Black Vascular Surgeons in the upcoming 2024 New York Symposium.

The World Federation of Vascular Societies is pleased to announce its 3rd year participating in the upcoming VEITHsymposium in New York. This prestigious event, known for its focus on advancements in vascular medicine and surgery, will provide an excellent platform for the Federation to share its latest research, innovations, and best practices with a global audience. Attendees can look forward to engaging presentations and discussions led by esteemed members of the Federation, highlighting their commitment to improving vascular health worldwide with diverse perspectives. Join us at the VEITHsymposium for an enriching experience and the opportunity to collaborate with leading experts in the field.

Palma M. Shaw, MD, Secretary-General, WFVS

The VEITHsymposium is a wonderful opportunity for global vascular education and partnerships. We greatly appreciate the support of this longstanding institution. In addition to our annual Women's Vascular Health Summit, in May, this meeting allows us a venue to which many women from other countries can participate along with women from North America. The VEITHsymposium has been very supportive of the ISWVS, facilitating our opportunity to work with women leaders from multiple countries to better understand vascular disease in women and to help promote women to leadership positions by giving them tools needed to progress. We hope that many of you will attend and participate. Sessions organized by the ISWVS are not just for women, but for those interested in the care of women with vascular disease as well as those interested in ensuring equal opportunities for all for advancement in our field.

Linda M. Harris, MD, President, ISWVS

As a young and growing society, the Society of Black Vascular Surgeons (SBVS) is dedicated to ensuring the holistic support of Black vascular surgeons, vascular surgery trainees, vascular surgery aspirants, and diverse health professionals dedicated to the prevention and management of vascular disease. It is an honor for us to have developed this collaboration with such a prestigious event as VEITHsymposium and we firmly believe that increased representation at this major meeting is a crucial step towards achieving this mission. In support of the upcoming VEITHsymposium, the SBVS plans to actively encourage participation at the Associate Faculty level. We believe that by fostering opportunities for our members to engage with such a distinguished platform, we can contribute to their professional growth and ensure a more diverse and inclusive future for vascular surgery. We are enthusiastic about this collaboration and look forward to working closely with the VEITHsymposium team. We encourage your attendance at this year's meeting as, together, we can make meaningful strides toward our shared goal of advancing the field and supporting the next generation of vascular surgeons.

Olamide Alabi, MD and Vincent L. Rowe, MD, representing the SBVS
